Freedom is what I'm looking for. Freedom from the mundane. I want to fly away for a second from the daily routine. It's really great out there. Your thoughts fly freely and then you land back on the ground again. The thought that you had when you were airborne is gone.

00 33

How was it?
Very nice, Aneta.

00 36

The jump right on the point. Repeat this one. Breast muscles more relaxed. Legs tight when landing.

00 47

It's a strange view to see a girl on the runway. People come especially to watch them, as they don't believe that girls can jump.

01 14

This one was much better. Although the body jumped before the legs, too fast.

01 20

Aneta is slightly better than the rest of the girls. This does not mean that next year they will not catch up with her.

01 37

When I jump I am a boy. I want to be treated the same way as boys are. When I jump I do this on equal terms with boys and that's also important to me. I want my coach to be frank with me and not beat about the bush. I want to know what I do right and wrong.

01 58

Put your skis on and check the bindings.

I don't want to grow out of my childhood. I think it's wonderful. Being an adult you can also have a child in you. The point is not to give up your dreams. I admire people who still have dreams, even if they are adults; even if they go to work every day. You can still do the ski jump. It's just wonderful to be a grown up child.

02 36

My fascination with the ski jump-started with Heinz Kutin. I was five back then. I thought he was the greatest. I loved him. It was Heinz, Heinz, and Heinz. Then he was injured and I started to support Goldberger. I also decided to jump myself. I knew that some girls were already training in Wisła. So I called the coach and he agreed. I started training. We arrived in Wisła and Mirek picked skis and boots for me. He has been my coach ever since.

I would love for this sport to really kick off in Poland. I am dreaming of a women's ski jumping team. I would like to be able to participate in competitions, to be able to travel. I know there was a chance to compete in Germany but we were not quite ready yet. But I will do this, if not this year then it will happen next year.

"Adam Małysz – Ski Jumping World Champion"

03 45

I hope that the discipline will evolve and there will be women jumpers in the Olympics and in the World Cup competitions.
